IV. New Business

A. Presentation on Mental Health with OSF Healthcare

JT Barnhart, President of OSF Sacred Heart Medical Center (OSF SMHC), presented on the new mental and behavioral health initiatives of OSF in Urbana. He began with some general background information about OSF SHMC in Urbana, noting that it's home to the area's only hospital-based inpatient Adult Behavioral Health service and that it provides mental health care for young adults, older adults, and people with combined medical and psychological needs. He also said that it still has 24/7 emergency services. He went on to note that there is a higher population of college-age students in this area whose mental health needs are underserved, and this initiative is helping to address that service gap.

Sara Rand asked about youth mental health needs in this area, noting that there is also a gap in available services for that segment. JT said it's possible that OSF will look to address that in future phases of program expansion. Kelsey asked what's driving the increase in mental health needs among the population, and JT responded that it's a combination of less stigma in seeking treatment and more awareness of mental health conditions and available resources.

JT also shared some information on other OSF Healthcare centers in central Illinois. OSF SMHC in Danville is a comprehensive health care facility serving Danville and surrounding areas, and is home to the Bobette Steely Hegeler Cancer Center. OSF Healthcare St. Joseph Medical Center is located in Bloomington-Normal and is an acute care Level II trauma center with specialty services including a Birth Center, cancer care, cardiovascular surgery, orthopedic surgery, neurosurgery, and neurointerventional radiology. Between Champaign-Urbana, Danville, and Bloomington-Normal, OSF Healthcare is able to serve a wide variety of healthcare needs.

JT then presented on the shifts in services OSF is making to accommodate the new mental and behavioral health initiatives in Urbana. Select inpatient services in Urbana are transitioning to Danville and Bloomington, so that Urban can focus on behavioral health, emergency care, and limited inpatient medical care. OSF is investing $13 million in Urbana to expand behavioral health – there will soon be 65 inpatient behavioral health beds. It is also investing $8 million in Danville to renovate the labor and delivery unit, which remains open during construction.

Some key points he noted about this transition:

- OSF Healthcare remains operational in Urbana
- Statewide there is overwhelming demand for behavioral health services that OSF is able to fill locally
- The target date for construction completion in Urbana is December 2026

He then reviewed some of OSF’s total service offerings in the area and some of their service statistics.

The conversation then transitioned to ways that the Urbana Park District (UPD), OSF, and the wider community might work cooperatively to address mental health needs in the community. There was some discussion of de-escalation training, and Rachel noted that UPD staff have undergone de-escalation training recently. Lucia noted that Urbana schools are now offering mental health screenings. Rachel also commented on Parks Rx, the program through NRPA that worked cooperatively with healthcare providers to write “prescriptions” for parks and outdoor activity as a way to help address mental health.

Some other suggestions for partnership included collaborating with OSF for Active Aging Week since their expansion offers services for older adults. Lori Choquette suggested that UPD and OSF might work together to offer periodic mental health screenings at the Health & Wellness Center.

Rachel Spencer suggested again that UPD bring back a little league style baseball program. Rachel said that Corky has brought the idea up with Recreation staff.
